The Lebanon Convention

One reads the proceedings of the Lohett on convention with something more than partisan dieguet, for it was not an ardinars political convention seeking mere per's spolls, but a convention to nominate a Judge, a Judge who will review the errors pass finally on the lives and property of our

Out of all the turmoil and disorder comes a nominee, in himself worthy to wear the honor, a lawyer of capacity, a gentleman of Integrity. His opponent, too, was, in all that goes to make a good Judge, his equal; yet each was forced to wade through the mire to reach the judgment seat.

We cannot pick fige from thietles. We can not expect a stream to be purer than its fountain.

We have fixed in our Constitution a evatem of electiva judiciary, but there is nothing In the written Constitution of the State, nothing in the unwritten constitution of the sald, with trembling voice and quivering parties which can justify such rioting and rowdyiam as were witnessed at Lebanon.

The tactics employed by one contestant wers exactly those of the other; success does not justify them on the one hand, nor does defeat reliave the other of all responsibillties. Those who appeal to a convention must shide by the decision of that conven-

Kentucky's Problem.

Prof. H. K. Taylor spoke at the Courthouse last Sunday afternoon on the above question. Says Prof. Taylor: "Kentucky's problem is not the penitentiary question, how mina, a very pretty grave stone. His wife | we shall dispose of our convicts; nor the question of revenue, how we shall lessen expanes and increase revenue, but the real problem is public education. This le Kenhopes were blasted. Never shall I forget tuck's problem and its solution is of vast the man's grief when I asked him to part importance to the State. How to solve this question was a task the Professor applied himself to, and he found the solution to li In discussion and agitation. He compared the school law of Kentucky with that of Louisville & Cincinnati to St. Louis to a fixed of tears. His spirit was indeed Ohio and found no cause for shame from the comparison. It was not a change of law that was needed, neither was it Feder. al ald to education. He did not favor Faderal ald unless it came unconditionly, and even then he did not think we needed it Public schools were the outgrowth of public sentiment. We must interest the people, the masses, in educational matters and then the question of money would take care of Itself. When the people become interested local aid would be added to the general fund until there would be no lacking for funds. He regretted the number of persons engeged in teaching as a mere expedient instead of making teaching the profession of a life time. He particularly condemned the number of email and incompetent echools at almost every cross road, which were called colleges, acade mies and universitier, and which were granting diplomas to everybody. What we want le more good, practical public schools, where the masses might receive a practical education. He announced himself a candidate for Superintendant of Pub llo Instruction and p'edged his entire strength to making a strong public senilment in favor of the public school aystem The number in attendance was not as large as was desired but was very attentive and the Professor made a very faworable impression .- [Mt. W. P. WALTON.

THE outrageous manner in which the proceedings of the Lebanon convention convened to nominate a judge for the next highest court in Kentncky, were conducted, continues to be the absorbing topic in this section and the had feelings that it engendered is not wearing off with that colerity which the lover of peace and democratic harmony would desire. In fact there are a number of hot-headed men who get medder the more they think of the way the rights of their favorite were trampled under foot and say they will vote for the devli before they will for a nomlnee made by ench questionable methods.

In the history of conventions there never was never such high-handed, flagrant and boasted over riding of the rights of the othег раггу. А совещее свативы раске ши committees, giving the opponents no representation whatever on the most important one of credentials, so that they might overlook its work and protest if necessary, and when appealed to ln the interest of fair play, responde, "To the victors belong the spolls." "We have the power on you now and intend to nee it for all it le worth. Help yourself if you can." There was perhaps some sembiauce of justice iu that committee seating the Barbour delegation from the 4th Louisville district, but when it with brezen effrontery sald that Washington county ought not to be allowed representation because of some imaginary lrregularity in the proceedings of its convention or if at ail a set of Barbonr men drummed up by the committee itseif, should cast the county's vote as they saw outrage, it went beyond the bounds of the commonest mobocracy.

The Barbour crowd went there to nominate him hy any methods necessary and in selecting Gen. Rodman as the chairman and Maj. Ed. Hughes, of the Louisville Fire Department, as assistant, they did not make a mistake. Rodman'e arbitary rulings and partisan conduct damns blm in the eyes of every fair minded man and had he the remotest respect for himself or perform the dirty work for the Louisville he contributed in sending a judge. gang. To him more than to any of the iowest of Barbonr's strikers attaches the disgrace that has been perpetrated in the name of the democratic party, by which the choice of the people was defeated by the machinations of a purchasable mob. Such conduct le fact breaking up the organization of our party and if it is to prevail the sooner it wipes it out the better.

We detest the very name of bolter and believe in accepting the result of any mude agreed upon to determine who shall be our standard-bearers. Fraud, however, viciates any contract in law and when It le so apparent, as in the present instance, democrate have serious cause for repudiating a nomination obtained both by fraudulent and treacherous means. The party methods must be purified, but whether the repudiation of Mr. Barbour will accomplish it, is a question. He may be as, innocent of the fraud of which he is beneficiary as we by his friends, and in common charity we ther reason that he is said to be a gentleman and a good lawyer, we believe that our gallant leader, Judge Saufley, who suffers most by the foul treatment, strikes the key note for his friends to resound when he votes from the democrate. says "I shall abide the resnit as officially announced and support the nominee." It won't do to cut off our noses to spite our faces by playing into the hands of the republicans, who are elated over the turn of affairs, but like sensible men and true democrate, we must meet the leeue calmly and fairly and walt for cooler moments to express ourselves as between a known democrat and a republican.

Until a few days ago, New York had a law permitting persons to be imprisoned for debt, but it was repealed by the iast legislature and on Its going into effect a large number of persons were released, among them one who had been in the Ludlow street jail for seven years. In some cases imprisonment and even hanging is too good for men who make debts with intent to defraud, but the law of imprisonment works great lujustice in many cases and le more apt to punish the honest than the rascally has reported adversely to the restoration of creditor.

It is gratifying to know that one mur derer has been held without bail in Judge Finley's district, but the Judge did not do it himself, it goes without saying. C. B. Lyttle, sitting as special judge in Letcher county, made the innovation in the established rights af the murderer in that dis trict and that cises of cattle are shaky, for once in six years. If murderers are to suffer the indignity of going to jail, they will five. begin to resent such inhumanlty by letting up in their business.

THE democrate of the Ninth Congressional dietrict will hold a convention at Augneta on the 8th of &September to nominate a candidate for Congress, delegates to which are to be selected in the verlous counties, September 4th. This is the only Kentucky district represented by a republican and if the democrate will harmonize and nominate a good man, our delegation in Cougrees can be made solid, as it ought to be.

THE fooiish custom of naming a list of delegates to a convention and adding "and proper, and the convention endorsed this all other good democrate," is one of the causes of Judge Saufley's defeat. By running in a lot of unprincipled, purchasable men, the Barbour men were enabled to defeat the will of the people of Taylor and Washington counties, expressed in their primeries, and just such an Instruction did the work. The diagraceful wrangie among the Taylor men was enough to disgust a dog. About Marriage.

Some marry for the fun of the thing and never see where it comes in. This is discourselng.

Some marry for the sake of a good companlon and never discover their mistake. This is lucky.

Man is a fickle "critter." Even Adam, who had his wife made to order, found more or less fault with her.

Don't marry a man for his reputation. It le liable to be only a second-hand affair, borrowed from his ancestors.

Many women have married men for their fine exterior. But that's all there is to an ancient egg worth mentioning.

Many marry to spite some one else, only to learn that they got the butt-end of the transaction, and Its worst end at that. Marriage is a lottery full of chances. That's what gives It flavor. Ali ilks to chance it, because everybody thinks to win

Wedlock, in Its original state, was as pure as sweet milk fresh from the cow, but man couldn't rest until he stripped it of much of its rich cream.

But few people marry for pure love, and they in after years suspicion that what were at the time promptings of the tender passion were, in all probability, but the first symptoms of cholers morbus.

The man who marries a woman simply because she is a handy arrangement to have about the house does so from a purely business standpoint, and in the end, if not compelled to support him, she has done hetter than many women I know of.

He Had the Last Play.

A young man and a young woman lean over the front gate. They are lovers; it la moonlight. He is loth to leave, as the parting le the last. He is about to go away. Shels reluctant to see him depart. They swing on the gate.

"I'll never forget you," he says, "and i death should claim me my last thought will be of you."

"I'll be true to you," she sobs, "I'll never see anyhody else nor love them as long as I live.'

Six years later he returns. His sweetheart of former years has married. They meet at a party. Between dances the recognition takes place. 'Let me see," she mnsee, with her fan heating a tattoo on her pretty hand, "was it you or your brother who was my old sweetheart?"

"Really, I don't know," he says. "Probably my hrother."

-An accident, which came near being serions, occurred to Mr Geisel and ble family coming into Crah Orchard on the Mt. Vernon road The train can not be reen to the north on account of the deep cut, and trequent narrow escapes have been made and loudle complained of on account of the failure of engioeers to whistle on approsching the crossing. Mr Geisel walted a few minutes to listen if a train was approaching, heard no warning or whistle, and started over. When on the track he saw an engine approaching at a rapid rate and had to whip his mare to get off in time to escape being struck by it, which so frightened the mare that she ran with such speed as to throw Mr. Geisel and his daughter ont and bruised them somewhat and demolished the wagon. The railroad authorites should take notice and provide means not quite so dangerone to the puh lic-or at least require train men to so far comply with the law as to run within the legalized rate and whistle on approaching ercasings.

NOTCH NUMBER 4.

About the middle of last December Deputy United States Marshal ke lett was mur-dered by the moonshiners in the nountains of north Georgia. An account of his killing, publi hed in a New York newspaper, and that another notch was cut in the big poplar that guards the entrance to Sleepy cove, the retreat of the outlaws, making five in eil, each significant of the death, at the hands of the illicit whisky-makers, of a revenue officer, and I think I can say without fear of contradiction that uo oue is bettar acquainted with Sleepy cove and that big popiar then myself. I knsw weil three of the poor fellows whose epitaphs stand gaping there, silent but awful warning to ail who would disturb the lewless men of that ionely cove; the fifth notch ie for Kellett, but for whom the fourth was cut seems still to be a unyetery to the surrounding neighborhood. Moonshiners seldou make mistakes in their matters of murder, but in this instance I think they have lost their reckoning. That fourth notch was cut for me. I saw it done with desth staring me In the face. Is it possible that the outlaws still believe that my bones are bleaching on the damp ground in Smoky hole!

When notch No. 3 was cut there was a great stir in north Georgia. Country peopie were wild with excitement. Revenue men riding through the mountains had a sort of itching in the back, and were incined often to turn in the saddia. We laid the murder of W—at the door of the notorious Cap Hawkins, the daring leader of a fearless band of outlaws in the Cohutta mountains, and as soon as possible we were on his trail with a good pack of bloodhounds. The scent was cold, and when we had penetrated some eight miles into tha the dors became disheartened. After circling round and round us time and again in search of the trail they gave it up, and we were forced to retreat without having accomplished anything.

It was dusk when we got out of the deep woods, and we began to look about fer place to stay for the night. A log cahin of two rooms was not inviting, but the old crone who came to the door said that she could provide for one of the party, and that the others might find accommodations at another cabin a mile down the road. In some way it wes arranged that I should stay at her house, and join the party next morning. She made me as comfortable as possible. For supper I had pure corn bread end molasses, with a great tin cup of some-thing hot called coffee. While I ate she smoked a clay pipe, sitting in the chimney corner, with her legs crossed and her foot swinging incessantly. When she epoke to me, which she did oftener than I liked, I could not haip feeling that she was trying to pump ma. She wanted to know entirely too much about the moonshiners and the revenue men, and before I finished my meai she made me look upon her with suspicion. Once or twice I ailuded to her family, for I thought it strange that she should liva alone, and even went so far as to inquire about her husband, and ask when he would be at home. But she replied evasively, and all I learned was that her old man and three grown sons were up on the mountain, tending crops. It did not require much axercise of my imagination to determine what kind of crops they were tending. In thinking of them my hand went instinctively to my trusty revolver, and the touch of the cold steel braced ma up. I wondered how the men were getting on down at the other cahin, and if they could bear a pistol-shot room, she returned to her chimney corner and her pipe and her foot-swinging. My bed was an old-fashioned ons, with ropes for springs and bear-skins for mattress and cover. I didn't undress, but crawled just as I was between the skins, and, lying on my back, thought I should not do niuch sleeping. When my eyes grew accustomed to the darkness and wandered aimlessly over the open ceiling, I saw something about the size of the bed banging directly over me. It seemed to swing slowly back and forth. I stood up and touched it, examined it as minutely as possible, and again lay down. It was nothing but three or four bed-quilts stretched across two boards supported at the ands by short ropes. If it grew colder in the night I would reach up to them for more

I intended to stay awake, but must have been nearly asleep when a creaking noise aroused ma. The next moment it was repeated, and the quiits above me descended rapidiy. It finshed upon me that I was in a trap. Drawing my weapon, I attempted to spring out of bed, determined to seil my life dearly, but as I straightened up the quilts covered me, and before I could throw them off strong hands were at the corners. It seemed as if a ton weight had failen upon me and doubled me up. My head was bent so close upon my hreast that I thought my neck would break. My breath came short aud fast.

With a frantic struggle I cocked my pistol, and, placing the muzzle close against the quilt, pulled the trigger. I fired at random, trusting that fate might guide the ball into the heart or head of some one of my cowardiy assailants. The concussion was awful in that narrow space. The smoke filled my eyes, nose, and ears, the shot rang through my brain; I felt that my last hour had come. My God, how I suffered! I remember a derisive laugh that seemed to come from another world, then something heavy struck me on the head.

When I recovered consciousness I was iyon my back in a joiting wagon, with my hands and feet securely bound. The pale blue of the sky above me and tha hazy outlines of the tree-tops reaching overhead told me that day was breaking.

"Wai, kurnel, nir ye come roun' all right?" said a deep voice at my head. Raising my ayes I saw leaning over me the grizzly face of the outlaw, Cap Hawkins, ite broke into a wild laugh at my look of astonish-

"Didn't 'spect ter see me this mornlu', did ye, kurnel?" ha said, tauntingly. "Whar atr yer dogs!-ha! ha!-an' yer Lorses!-he! bo!-an' yer-haw! haw! ho!-an' repytation! Aw, Lordy. Say, kurnel, whar air ye a takin' me this morning! Air yer a goin' ter lock old Cap Hawkins up

His laughter echoed through the woods and sounded Hendish as it came back from the mountain side. I knew Cap llawkins well. Lawless as he was, there was in his composition a certain wild chivairy pecultar to these meu of the mountains. Brave as a lion, he had an unbounded admiration for courage in others; cumning as a fox, he respected a man who could outdo him in crattiness. Knowing this, I determined to sasume a hold sir, and affect a supreme indifference to my fate, whatever that was

"O, Cnp, dry up," I began, winking slyly at him. "Don't frighten the revenus men; they'il he after you again."

sides over the joke. He was immensely Mckled "Sey your prayere. Cap," I continued,

Again he roared as if he would split his

"it'll be a long time before you see daylight again. "What air ye a-drlvin' at, kurnel!" he asked, seriously, casting his eyes about him, My shot had missed, but I kept firing. "Well, you see, Hawkins, now that I've got you in my power, I'm going to put you Senn-Edeekly Interior Journal out of the way for good. You come along with me to the cove. There's a warm hole with me to the cove. There's a warm hole in the side of the mountain in which you can spend the winter, board and lodging free. Come, brace up, Cap; when you see how comfortable it is there you'll want to lease the place for life."

The outlaw made no response to my random talk, nor did ha laugh as before. Something seemed to worry him, for he fldgeted about and scratched his nacombel head and ran his bony fingers through his grizzled, tangled beard.

"Look a hvar kurnel," said the moon shiner, leaning close to me and boring into ma with his black eyes, "air ye ever been thar?"

"There! Where, Cap!" "Why, of course, don't I know every hole and crag in the Cohuttas!" "Then that settles it, kuruel. I 'lowed ye war jokin. Waw, Patsy, waw Suck, WAWD He reined in his horses and stopped the wagon. Taking up an ax ha han'led it to some person on the ground, and said a few words which I dld not understand. I tried to raise myself to look out, but fell back helpless, full of sharp, shooting pains. My joints refused to bend, my neck creaked when I tried to turn my head, and the struggia of the night come back to ma like a horrible repetition. At the first sound of the ax Cap liawkins put his arm under my back and forced ma to sit upright.

"Cobe air a-custin yer tembstone, kurnei, an' I 'lowed ye'd like to glt a last look." To the right of the wagon stood a glant poplar lifting its shaggy top 300 feet above the road. In its trunk were three gaping wounds, and a moonshiner in broad hat and big boots was cutting a fourth. Two other ill-looking men stood near, their guns in their hands

"Kurnel," continued my guard, "do ye want ter write yer epertaph?" The man laughed at their chief. "Them other three revies didn't git nary charce ter write theirn. Boys, air any o' yet got a pencili"
Too well I knaw the meaning of that notch front which the sappy chips were flying. My heart quivered as the ax ate its way into the soft wood. My face must have reflected my thought, for the outlaw, giving me a gentle push, sent me on my back. "Lay down, knrnel, and don't git so all-fired skeered," he said. "That air a mighty comf'table hole up in the hills-board an lodgin' frea." And quoting my own words, he fairly made the weiklu ring with his coarse laughter.

"Surely you don't intend to murder ma. "That air jes about it, I reckon, kurnel Ye air cross the dead-line, an' yer epertaph air done writ," Before I could say more his three companions climbed into the wagou beside me. Clucking to his horses he drove on at a trot through the pass, and as the sun rose over the mountain we entered the precincts of Sleepy cove. it must have been after 10 o'clock, yet into that lonesome apot the sun was just beginning to pour his raya. By 2 p. m. he would disappear behind the jagged cilff that formed the western boundary of the retreat, and the long twilight would set in, with its spectral shadows chasing each other in the dark wood. Often had I heard the country folk talk with bated breath of the horrors of Sleepy cove. Gobiins, they sald, dweit in the mountain caves, coming forth at dusk to froic with the feariess moonshiners, and dancing at midnight upou the slippery crags. Ghouls, armed with the bones of murdered men, kept nightly vigil at the narrow pass, and if any human being approached from the outside they gathered around the giant poplar and beat upon the bark till the frightened man disappeared in the direction whence he came. No man but the moenshiners had ever been known to come from Sleepy cove alive, consequently none aver voluntarily entered that wild, uncanny place. These thoughts were passing through my mind when suddenly the wagon stopped and the four men threw themselves into at titudes of attention, grasping their guns and casting furtive glances at each other. Straining my ear I thought I heard the faint yelp of a bound. Cap Hawkins iashed his horses into a gallop, and we sped on through the woods for half a mile, stopplng again in the shadow of a cliff. At leader's order two of the men lifted me out of the wagon, and half dragged me to a spot where the earth formed a kind of bench against the rock wall. Placing me on the ground they began prying at a bowlder, which, gradually yielding to their hand sticks, rolled over on its side, exposing a hote in the cliff. Into this they dragged me for some twenty feet and tossed me on a bed of leaves. Then one of the men brought in some food, and another water and auother wood. I turned to the outlaw leader and asked how long he intended to keep me prisoner. He laughed at the question, but made no repiy. Going to the cave's mouth he peered stealthily out, listenel awhile, and came tack to me. There was an ominous giftter ln his eyes. It looked like murder. My God! Was he going to bury me alive! begged him to shoot me, cut my throatsnything hut leave me there to starve. But he paid no attention to my appeals. "Ef ye air 'ilve when I git back, kurnel -ef I git tack," he sald, "why me an' the boys mought put a leetle lead in yer enreasa. Ye may hev comp'ny 'fore night, enyhowa The revies nir arter us hotter'n demnitiou hiazes. They air done 'cross the dead line.

"I hope they'll give you all you deserve, you cold-blooded murderer," I said, wishing that I could throttle the vilain.

Hyar the moosic, kurnel?"

"Now, kurnel, don't git out o' sorta. It air mighty comf'table in hyer-board au' lodgin' free. Boys, alr ye ready! Them hounds air pickin' us up. Light the fire, Cobe. Kurnei, hyer air a knife ter cut yer loose arter we leave ya Don't git skeered o' the ghosts, and 'member ye air mighty comf'table—board an' lodgin' free; an' yer epertaph air down on the hig poplar. Goodhy, kurnel"

The outlaws were already placing the bowlder in position, and when Cap liawkins had squeezed his way out the rock was rolled into the opening. With a crunching sound it settled into place, and I was a prisoner in Smoky hole.

I listened for the baying of the hounds, hoping that they had tracked me to the cave, but not a sound penetrated the door of my prison. The fire burned briskly, and Smoky hole glowed in the light of the blazing pine-knots. It was the work of a few minutes to cut my konde with the knife the outlaw had given me, and then I took an inventory of the contents of the cavern, The place and evidently been fitted up for the lifeit manufacture of "mountain dew" and "tangle-foot" and "red-eyo," for there were the wornout copper atlll, the worm, the mash-tub, jugs, and flasks, and other apparatus of the moonshiner. The cave was about the size of a railroad box car, except that the roof was higher and more arched. I jabled my knife into every square foot of the wails. They were of solid rock. In a vain, mad effort to roll the bowlder from the entrance I drew the blood from my shoulder. It was all of no use. Unless help came to me from without my doom was sealed. A duli, heavy feeling came over me and I sat down near the tire. The confined air was getting close. Suddenly, on looking up, I was appailed at the discovery of a new danger. The roof of the cavern was no longer visible. The dense, black smokt of the pitch pine, unabla to escape, was banked above ma like an ominous cloud, ever growing denser and blacker and descending steadily, remorselessly, upon me liks a veritable shadow of death.

Already the asphyxiating gases were caus ing my brain to whirl. I crawled to the fire and stamped upon the blazing knots until every spark was axtinguished, but they continued to send up their stilling smoke. I could feel it ascending, hot and pittless. Falling flat upon the ground I saturated my coat sieeve with tha water the outlaws had left me, and placing it against my mouth secured a few full breaths of strained gas. But they gave ms little respite. The high pressure of the atmosphere made my veins swell aimost to bursting, my hands and feet were benumbed, and I was soon unable to move a muscle. Then I longed for death.

Suddenly there was a loud explosion, fol lowed by a failing of loose earth and rock and a rush of air. A faint ray of light appeared in the corner of the cavern over the still, growing broader and stronger as the smoke cleared away. With life and atrength renewed, I made my way to the opening, where I drank in the fresh air with a swelling heart and a lighter conscience than I had ever hoped to possess. The explosion had torn away some rough masonry with which the moonshiners had stopped up a fisure in the rock. It never occurred to me in my investigation of the cave that there ought to be some way of axit for the smoke of the still. But everything was plain enough now. I had found the chimney, and it was my datermination to use it to advantage. In a moment, forgetful of the pains and hruises, I was climbing for freedom. It was a tight squeeze now and then, but I made rapid progress, and felt so good over my prospects of escape that I wanted

But prudence restrained ma Soon the rocky sides of the chimney gave place to wood, and the opening changed from flat to round. Still I climbed on, my spirits rising with my ascent. My progress was made comparatively easy by the imita-tion of Brer Rabbit's method of climbing a stump hollow-that is, by bracing my back against one side of the chimney and my feet and hands against the other. But the opening grew tighter and tighter, like an inverted funnel, and still the top seemed a long way of. I must have climbed some thirty feet in all when I stopped to rest, propping my foot against a knot-like projection, which suddenly breaking off left a hole through which the daylight etreamed. Then for the first time, It flashed upon the that I was in a hollow tree. A glance through the knothole proved this to be tha case, for there was the ground ten feet below me—the bench of earth I had neticed when the cutlaws were making ready for my incarceration. Escape now seemed certain. The wall of my prison was only two inches thick, and though the wood was dry and hard from age and exposure to smoke and heat my knife was soon at work enlarging the knothole. As this faced the cove, I could keep a lookout for the moonshiners and stop cutting at the least suspicious noise. Night soon shut in, and with the darkness there came peculiar sounds from cliff and wood-But I paused not to think of ghoul iand or gohlin. It would have taken somsthing far more terribia than ghostly warnings to check the steady going of my knife in the waary hours that followed the sunset, for I hoped to turn my back on Sleepy core ere the dawn of another day. But when the eun rose my task seemed not nearly done. The knife was duiled, and my strength had slowly ebbed away.

The baying of a hound reached ma It was repeated, and in a moment the thrilling music of the pack waked again and again the sleeping schoes of Sleepy cova. Neares and nearer it came, until a dozen fins bloodhounds hurst through the underbrush and dashed up to the bowlder at the entrance to Smoky hole. Then opening again they sped away on the cold trail of the moon

"Dan, here Dan; down, sir!" I shouted to the leader with all my might. The obedient hrute, recognizing my voice, dropped to the ground. I called him to me, and soon the entire pack was barking playfully at the roots of my novel prison, rejoicing, no doubt, at having treed their master. Hearing a well known signal in the woods I answered it, and one by one five of my friends crept cantiously up to the cave, carbines in hand. When I spoke to them from my port-hole there was a broad smile on every face. An ax was procured, and, while four of the men guarded against surprise, the fifth cut a window in my jail, through which I crawled, having been a prisoner nearly twenty hours.

When we reached the big poplar that guards the pass to Sleepy cove I fastened in the fourth notch a piece of paper bearing

"Cap Hawkins, beware The colonel is on your trail. Go look for his bones in Smoky hola ECHARLER." -Chicago Times

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Should be kept constantly at hand, for use in emergencies of the household. Many a mother, startled in the night by the ominous sounds of Cronp, finds the little sufferer, with red and swollen face, gasping for air. In such cases Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. Emma Gedney, 159 West 128 st., New York, writes: "While In the country, last winter, my little boy, three years old, was taken lil with Croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was tried in small and frequent doses, aud, lu less than haif an hour, the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Pectoral saved my darling's life." Mrs. Chas. B. Laudon, Guilford, Couu., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Saved My Life,

and also the life of my little son. As he is troubled with Croup, I dare not be without this remedy in the house." Mrs. J. Gregg, Lowell, Mass., writes: "My children have repeatedly taken Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Coughs and Croup. It gives lumediate relief, followed by cure." Mrs. Mary E. Evans, Scranton, Pa., writes: "I have two little boys, both of whom have been, from infancy, subject to violent attacks of Croup. Abou. six months ago we began using Aver's Cherry Pectoral, and it acts like a charm. In a few minutes after the child takes it, ha breathes easily and rests well. Every mother ought to know what a blessing I have found in Ayer's Cherry I'ectoral." Mrs. Wm. C. Reid, Freehold, N. J., writes "In our family, Ayer's medicines have been blessings for many years. In cases of Colds and Coughs, we take

and the inconvenience is soon forgotten." PREPARED BY

should be your crowning giory. Ayer's Hair Viger will restore the vitality and color of youth to hair that has become ilin and faded; and, where the glands are not decayed or absorbed, will cause a new growth on bald heads.

MAY the youthful color and vigor of the hair be preserved to old age? Read the following, from Mrs. G. Norton, Somerville, Mass.: "I have used Aver's iluir Vigor for the past 30 years; and, although I am upwards of 60, my hair is as abundant and glossy to-day as when I was 25."

BE assured, that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor will convince you of its powers. Mrs. M. E. Goff, Leadville, Col., writes: "Two years ago, my hair having almost entirely failen out. I commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. To-day my hair is 29 inches long, fine, strong, and healthy."

RENEWED and strengthened by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, the imir regains lts youthful color and vitality. Rev. H. P. Williamson, Davidson College, Mecklenburg Co., N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the last ten years. It is an excellent preservative."

BY the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, Geo.
A. Dadman, Waterloo, Mo., had his hair restored to its original healthy condition. He was nearly baid, and very gray. ile writes: "Only four bottles of the Vigor were required to restore my hair to its youthful color and quantity."

USING Ayer's Hair Vigor cures diseases of the scalp. F. II. Foster, Princeton, Ind., writes: "I had been troubled for years with a disease of the scalp; my head was covered with dandruff, and the hair dry and harsh. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave me immediate relief, cleansed the scalp, and rendered the hair soft and pliable."
